

It sounds like you're describing a person who has made a significant impact in both the personal healing and community development spheres, particularly focusing on vulnerable populations like refugees. Here's a refined version that captures his qualifications and mission:

Founder of Healed to Heal Fellowship

Jean Claude Ndayizeye, the founder of Healed to Heal Fellowship, is dedicated to providing trauma healing, supporting the vulnerable, and advocating for the prevention of drug abuse while promoting community development. With a deep understanding of the challenges faced by refugee communities, Jean Claude's work centers on addressing both individual and collective wounds, empowering individuals to heal and restore their dignity.

He has been certified as a Trainer of Trainers by Rabagirana Ministries, equipping him with skills to pass on knowledge and training in community-based healing and leadership. Jean Claude a masters candidate in Project Management also holds a Bachelor's Degree in Business Administration, specializing in Cooperative Management and Accounting, and has graduated in Theology from Emmaus correspondence school and holds a Diploma in Community Leadership from Alongsiders International.

Having personally experienced the trials of being a refugee, Jean Claude brings a unique perspective to his work, understanding the deep, often unspoken emotional scars carried by those displaced by conflict. His passion for trauma healing and his drive to prevent the spread of harmful behaviors like drug abuse stem from a desire to help rebuild broken lives, starting with the most vulnerable groups in refugee communities and extending to the broader society.

This revised version captures both his qualifications and the core essence of his mission. If you need additional details or would like to expand on any specific area, let me know!
